

Best Wishes on Vietnamese Doctors' Day – February 27

Dear doctors, lecturers, scientists, healthcare workers, medical and pharmaceutical students, and esteemed readers,

On the occasion of Vietnamese Doctors' Day – February 27, on behalf of the Editorial Board of the Thai Binh Journal of Medicine and Pharmacy, I would like to extend my heartfelt greetings and best wishes to all those working and studying in the fields of medicine and pharmacy across Vietnam.

This occasion serves as a meaningful opportunity for us to express our gratitude and honor the invaluable contributions of generations of Vietnamese physicians in their noble mission of caring for, protecting, and improving public health.

The medical profession is a highly esteemed vocation that demands not only intelligence and dedication but also compassion and self-sacrifice for the well-being of the community. As Vietnam's healthcare sector continues to advance, doctors, pharmacists, and scientists must make continuous efforts to drive medical progress, enhance healthcare service quality, and contribute to safeguarding public health.

Fulfilling its mission as a dedicated scientific forum, the Thai Binh Journal of Medicine and Pharmacy remains committed to supporting scientists, doctors, and healthcare workers in research and academic exchange, ultimately improving the quality of healthcare for the community. We sincerely hope to receive continued contributions from researchers, lecturers, and medical experts to further the development of Vietnamese medicine.

Once again, I wish all doctors, lecturers, scientists, healthcare workers, medical and pharmaceutical students, and esteemed readers good health, wisdom, steadfast commitment to medical ethics, and continued dedication to the noble mission of public health.

Sincerely,

Editor-in-Chief

Assoc. Prof. Nguyen Thanh Binh, MD, Ph.D
